USPA NEWS - Stephane Le Foll, Minister of Agriculture, Agri-Food and Forestry has completed the installation of the Observatory of the Agricultural Technical Education (OETA), on September 28, 2015. The Observatory of the Agricultural Technical Education was created July 15, 2015.

Stephane Le Foll, Minister of Agriculture, Agri-Food and Forestry has completed the installation of the Observatory of the Agricultural Technical Education (OETA), on September 28, 2015.----------
The Observatory of the Agricultural Technical Education was created July 15, 2015, and is responsible for evaluating the independent organisation and the results of the public and private technical agricultural education, and its adequacy in terms of qualification and employment but also educational and vocational integration of pupils, students, apprentices and trainees.The observatory will report annually to the Minister for Agriculture. This report will be presented to the National Council of Agricultural Education (CENA) and will be made public.
The observatory is composed of twelve members appointed because of their expertise in evaluation or in education. Stephane Le Foll announced on this occasion the launch in early 2016 of a prospective study on careers and training in agricultural education by 2030. The observatory will be closely associated with this work, which will feed into reflections.
